H2 Frequently asked questions

H3: What does a settlement concierge in Australia do?

A settlement concierge guides new arrivals through every practical step of settling in Australia — from pre-arrival document preparation to finding a rental, setting up a bank account, getting a Tax File Number, connecting with schools, and building community. At SettleANZ, the concierge service is run by Entel Dajsmali, who went through the full migration and settlement journey himself in 2001. He knows what the system actually looks like from the inside not just what the government websites say.

H3: What is included in the airport meet and greet service?

From the moment you land, someone is there with your name. We sort your SIM card before you leave the airport, arrange your transport to your first address, and give you a neighbourhood briefing, where to shop, which GP bulk bills, how to get around. For the first 7 days, you have direct WhatsApp access to Entel for any question that comes up. It is the difference between landing in a new country feeling lost and landing feeling like someone is in your corner from day one.

H3: How does SettleANZ help with finding a rental in Australia?

Finding a rental in Australia is hard when you have no local rental history or references — which is the situation every new arrival faces. SettleANZ handles the search on the ground. Entel or a vetted local attends inspections on your behalf, sends you walkthroughs, and submits applications with supporting documentation that gives you the best chance of being approved. We also match you to suburbs that fit your commute, budget, community, and family needs — not just whatever comes up on realestate.com.au.

H3: How much does it cost to settle in Australia as an expat?

In Sydney or Melbourne, expect to spend $3,000 to $6,000 AUD in your first 90 days, covering bond and rent in advance (typically 4 to 6 weeks upfront), furniture and household basics, SIM and utilities, groceries and transport, and professional services like accountants or school applications. Regional cities like Brisbane, Adelaide, and Perth are 20 to 30 percent cheaper. SettleANZ provides a personalised cost breakdown as part of the Pre-Arrival Strategy package, matched to your city and family situation.
